

THE FALL OF ALAMO, OR LAST DAYS OF CROCKETT.

A pamphlet, with this title, has been issued in St. Louis; it is by John H. Brown, a gentleman who has resided many years in Lavaca, Texas, and writes from observation and correct information, derived from enquiry on the spot. It gives an account of Fannin's Massacre, as well as the battles of Concepcion, Goliad, San Antonio, and in fact the history of the war, we copy a part of the DEATH OF CROCKETT.

Col. Crockett, wounded and closely pursued by a number of the enemy, retreated into the church, felling them as they approached, he stationed himself in a niche, and in the corner determined to face the foe to the last, and sell his life dearly; with his favorite rifle and a superabundance of small arms, he hewed and shot them down with the same awful certainty which was characteristic of his indomitable spirit. His position rendered access to him impossible, except by a direct and exposed approach in front; and after some eight or ten had been laid dead before him, a feeling of awe seemed to seize hold of the assailants. One of them who could speak a little broken English, probably preferring to have the signal honor of capturing so noble a specimen of American valor, to present to his 'dread master,' said to Crockett, 'surrender senior.' A flash of most sovereign scorn darted from his fiery eye, as it pierced that of his enemy, he seemed to be transfixed. In a voice of thunder, Crockett answered—'Surrender! No! I am an American! and as he spoke, he sent a ball through the heart of the paralyzed foe. He appeared for a moment like a wounded tiger, strengthened and buoyed by each additional wound; now heaving them down with his well-tried sword—next dealing death with his fire-arms. His person was literally drenched with his own blood; his strength must yield to his loss. Yet such physical power wrought to the highest degree of excitement can perform incredible prodigies. This was the last concentrated energy of a powerful man, animated and guarded by one of the attributes of man—love of liberty. He knew for what his life was to be sacrificed, that devastation and butchery would follow the footsteps of his heartless foes—that helpless women would be sacrificed to satiate the cruel desires of the conqueror; and feeling the holy inspiration of a dying patriot, he fought manfully till the loss of blood and the approach of death stayed his upraised arm; his rifle was broken to pieces, his pistol fell to the floor, and nothing but his faithful sword remained. In the agony of death, with a terrible grasp, he brought his last weapon down upon the head of his nearest assailant, and fell victoriously across his body, in the arms of death. In this corner of the church there were twenty six dead Mexicans, and no other American having fought or fallen at that point, it is considered beyond reasonable doubt that all of them fell by the hand of 'Tennessee's favorite son! all were now dead. Not a compeer to raise a monument is required to perpetuate their fame. So long as freedom has an abiding place in America, will their heroic deeds and proud names be held sacred.

Be it Known,
THAT PERRY & DEXTER have just received, and are now opening, an entire new, rich and desirable stock of Spring and Summer goods, comprising a general assortment of

Here we come.

The Morgan Tiger.
THIS celebrated Morgan Tiger was sired by the Morgan Champion, of Lancaster, N. H., and is eight years old this spring, and weighs between 11 and 1200 lbs. His color is a beautiful light dappled chestnut. The breed of Morgan horses are too well known to go into a long detail by way of pedigree, which is wholly unnecessary. This Horse will be found this season at the following places, viz: At Ezra Purple's in Gill, Mass., on Mondays; at Col. Paul Chase's in Greenfield, on Tuesdays; at Mr. Parker's in Montague, on Wednesdays; at J. Hunt Blake's in Northfield, on Thursdays; at William Follet's in Winchester, N. H., on Fridays; the remainder of the week at the stable of the subscriber in Hinsdale.
The Morgan Tiger will commence his visits May 15th, and continue them regularly thro' the season. For particulars see bill.

Morgan de Forest.

THIS celebrated MORGAN HORSE was bred by Derrick Hartwell, of Langdon, N. H. He is the largest of the Sherman Morgan stock, and weighs 1200 pounds. Color, a beautiful dark chestnut.
Pedigree—Morgan de Forest was got by the well known Horse Cock of the Buck, (the best out of the old Sherman Morgan), out of the noted Hartwell Mare, sired by the famous Stock Horse de Forest, imported by Dr. Jarvis of Claremont, N. H. There can be no question as to the blood of this fine Horse, which can be traced directly back on the Mare's side, to a distinguished imported English Mare.
Farmers and lovers of good horses, are requested to examine this Horse before they make any contracts for their breeding mares. His action and carriage are very superior, and he is not surpassed by any Stallion in the country for trotting. The owner of this fine Horse has been at much expense to procure one of the best Horses in this State, and he knows he has succeeded, as far as muscular power, speed, beauty, and fine proportion can be combined in one horse.
De Forest may be found (during the season of 1844) at the stable of the Proprietor, in Brattleboro, where he can be seen at all times.
For further particulars see bill.
